THE CENTRE TRAINING AND AWARDS INDEX OF THESES

Introduction

In the years since IDRC's inception in 1971, the Centre has funded a great deal of research leading to the completion of Master's or PhD level degrees, both for Canadians furthering their expertise in development, and for Southern researchers pursuing higher education.

Given this important and on-going contribution to development research, the Centre Training and Awards Unit (CTA) decided in the spring of 1994, to produce a "snapshot" of the most tangible output of Centre-supported academic research - the completed theses. A consultant was retained to work with CENTRA (the in-house database of the Centre Training and Awards Unit) and Library databases to facilitate the completion of a comprehensive theses index.

The Results

The final product is an Index containing 317 theses reflecting research in a wide variety of disciplines, topics, and regions -- all supported or administered in whole or in part by the Corporate Affairs and Initiatives Division (CAID), the Centre Training and Awards Unit, or its predecessor, the Fellowships and Awards Division (FAD).

The Index represents only a fraction of the total research or training carried out with Centre support. Of the 2732 awards recorded in CENTRA, some 1590 led to the completion of Masters or PhD degrees while the remainder were generally used for short-term training.

The index is relatively small for several reasons. Firstly, the index was limited to CAID or FAD supported research while much of what is in CENTRA also includes theses supported through other divisions or programs. Secondly, because the index is a "snapshot" it does not include some of the more recently submitted work that needs to be added to the Centre Library collection. Lastly, some of the Centre-supported theses have never been submitted to the CTA or Library and, consequently, do not appear in the index.

The Index is generated from the Centre Library's database (Bibliol). The Index is dynamic and will continue to grow as more CTA-supported theses are produced and added to the IDRC Library collection. Updated versions of this Index can be produced from the Library database as required.

The index is organized in the following way:

- * Field of study (eg. Agriculture, Communication, Earth Sciences)
- * Level of study (i.e. PhD or Master's)
- * Author
- * Title (in italics)
- * Pages, year, and university
- * IDRC project number
- * Library archive and microfiche numbers.

Of the 317 theses listed in this index:

207 represent degrees obtained from a Canadian university

154 represent work at the Masters level

163 represent work at the PhD level.

All theses contained in this Index are available for consultation in the IDRC Library. In addition, microfiche copies are available on request. Hopefully, the reader will find this index informative and interesting. Should you have any questions about the index or IDRC-supported research please contact:

Acknowledgements

This Index of Theses would not have materialized without the patience and expertise of several IDRC staff. In particular, I would like to thank Cathy Mak for her work with the CENTRA databases, and Diane Ceponkus for fulfilling numerous requests for information from the Library databases. Thanks also to Marjorie Whalen for assistance early in the process and Colin Townsend for designing the clear and well organized format of the Index. Finally a very special thank-you to Maureen Sly who helped the CTA articulate what was needed in a Thesis Index, and helped to coordinate the process from beginning to end.
